IS AN ATTACK ON ALL

一人への差別は、みんなの差別。
Welcome.

Thank you for joining us today at the Japanese American National Museum.

On February 19, 1942, Franklin Roosevelt signed Executive Order 9066, authorizing the removal and incarceration of 120,000 people of Japanese ancestry living on the west coast. The Commission on Wartime Relocation and Intemment of Civilians, concluded this action to be based on wartime hysteria, racial prejudice and a failure of political leadership.

Throughout the country, Day of Remembrance events are traditionally held in Japanese American communities every February to observe the signing of Executive Order 9066 and the lesson it teaches us about civil rights, human dignity, and the need to be vigilant against State-sponsored bigotry.

Today’s political leadership is once again complicit in a climate of fear and prejudice that has spread throughout the country, especially since the election, spawning hate crimes as well as inaction against actions targeting other marginalized groups of people.

This year’s DOR program will be an inter-cultural and cross-community gathering; all united for civil rights and human rights.

An attack on one is an attack on all!

We encourage each of you to reflect on your call to action in the back of this program; our work only begins here.

NORMAN MINETA has a public service record that spans 30 years which include a 21-year career with the U.S. House of Representatives. During World War II, Mineta and his family were incarcerated at Heart Mountain. Mr. Mineta first served as a member of San Jose’s Human Relations Commission, city council, vice mayor, and mayor. He was the first Japanese American to be elected mayor of a major U.S. city. President Clinton appointed him to his Cabinet as Secretary of Commerce, making him the first Asian American Cabinet member. He was appointed by President George Bush as Secretary of Transportation at the start of the President’s term and was reappointed to serve a second term. A highlight of his political career was the passage of the Civil Liberties Act of 1988, which redressed the injustices endured by Americans of Japanese ancestry during World War II.

MIKE HONDA Former Congressman Mike Honda was born at the onset of WWII in Walnut Grove, California. His family was incarcerated in Amache, Colorado, and returned to California in 1953. He started college at San Jose State University but interrupted his studies to study President John F. Kennedy’s call to Americans to serve our country. Mr. Honda served in the Peace Corps in El Salvador, building schools and learning Spanish. He became a member of the State Assembly in 1996, where he established the California Civil Liberties Public Education Program, which funded projects that educated the public about the WWII incarceration of Japanese Americans. Congressman Honda was the Chair of the Congressional Asian American Pacific American Caucus from 2004-2010. He was Vice Chair of the Democratic National Committee for eight years, ensuring that the DNC represented API concerns. After September 11, Congressman Honda spoke out against hate crimes committed against Sikhs, Muslims, and people of color. With the passage of House Resolution 1376, he fought for the dignity of and redress for the Japanese American, WWII sex slaves, known euphemistically as the “Comfort Women.” He secured $150 million to eliminate human trafficking. For his many pursuits for justice for women’s rights, Native American tribal sovereignty and self-determination, immigration reform, LGBTQ equality and rights, and equality in education, Congressman Honda received a lifetime achievement award from the Congressional Progressive Caucus.

AL MURATSUCHI was elected to the California State Assembly in November, 2016 to represent California’s 66th Assembly District which includes the communities of Gardena, Hermosa Beach, Lomita, Harbor City, Harbor Gateway, Manhattan Beach, Palos Verdes Estates, Rancho Palos Verdes, Redondo Beach, Rolling Hills, Rolling Hills Estates, Torrance, El Camino Village, and West Carson. Muratsuchi is a former prosecutor and Deputy Attorney General with the California Department of Justice. He also served as a Torrance School Board Member and a criminal prosecutor with the L.A. County District Attorney’s Office and Santa Ana City Attorney’s Office. Muratsuchi’s commitment to public safety was cultivated throughout the years he spent fighting for safer communities in Southern California. In addition to prosecuting consumer fraud and enforcing accountability among corporations, he took action against sexual predators, drug dealers, and other criminals. Muratsuchi previously represented the 66th Assembly District from 2012-2014.
HARU KUROMIYA is a 90 year-old second generation Japanese American. Her family were farmers in Riverside when World War II broke out and people of Japanese descent were sent to “internment” camps. Haru and her family were incarcerated at the Manzanar War Relocation Center, and because her Issei father was considered an “enemy alien”, the family was sent to Crystal City, Texas where they remained for three years. Haru became an NCRR member in 1989, has lobied in Washington D.C. on behalf of Japanese Latin American former incarcerees, and has remained active in the organization. Although reluctant, she has spoken out at events and vigils- in honor of her dear friend Rei Osaki who got her involved with social justice issues. Her story was recently featured in a PSA produced by Katya Perry that warned against letting history repeat itself.

KURT IKEDA, a South Bay raised Shin-Nisei, is an educator by profession, poet by passion. As an English teacher at Camino Nuevo High School, he firmly believes that education is a political act and that the key to our collective liberation is a critically conscious classroom. KUROMIYA

KAHLLID ABDOUL AL-ALIM resides in the Hyde Park community of South Central L.A. He’s currently President of the Park Mesa Heights Community Council and Co Founder of the community development non-profit, Friends of Park Mesa Heights. As a parent activist with Coalition for Educational Justice he works alongside United Teachers L.A. to construct forums and trainings for the “Schools L.A. Students Deserve” campaign to enhance the knowledge of parents in the L.A. Unified School District about local control accountability and education reforms that will increase academic achievement for low income students of color. Kahlid co-wrote Chapter 3; “Coalition for Educational Justice: Anti-Racist Organizing and Teacher Education” for Teacher Education with an Attitude, by Mary and Patrick Finn, SUNY Press Albany (2007), and “Educational Justice, Teaching and Organizing against the Corporate Juggernaut” by Howard Ryan, Monthly Review Press (2016). He currently serves as Board District 1 Parent Representative for L.A.U.S.D.

ADRIANA CARRERA, community organizer, born and raised in South Central Los Angeles. Daughter of two undocumented Mexican immigrants, she is the first in her family to graduate from college. Adriana received her B.A. in Chicano Studies and Political Science with an emphasis in Public Policy and Management. Currently, she is a master’s degree student in Educational Leadership Policy at CSUN. After turning 19, she began her work to stop police brutality, the exploitation of workers, and other forms of violence in the community. At age 20, she joined the Central Alameda Neighborhood Council as the Education Representative, assisting hundreds of students to get to college. Now 24, Adriana is running for L.A. City Council District 9 to transform her community.

SAMBAA HUTMAN is Director of Remember Us, an organization dedicated to the sacred ritual practice of bringing the names of children murdered in the Holocaust into the hearts and minds of the living. In 2011, Sam drew on her roots in the L.A. arts and film communities to help develop The Righteous Conversations Project as a collaborative venture of educators, scholars, artists, filmmakers, and change agents working with teens and survivors. Sam’s role in the project grows from her belief in the connection of art, memory and social change. It is the nexus of past, present and future that allows us to envision a better world. The Righteous Conversations Project invites all who feel connected to the work of Holocaust remembrance and wish to support teens in speaking up about injustice to join us. We seek partners who long to shape the world justly, humanely and with dignity for all.

SAHAR PIRZADA identifies as a Pakistani-American Muslim woman from the Bay Area. Her passion for social justice stems from her Muslim identity and the belief that Islam as a way of life challenges oppression in all its forms. She is a current Masters of Social Work candidate at the University of Southern California. Prior to formally starting her graduate studies, she worked as the Youth Development Manager at the Council on American-Islamic Relations, Greater Los Angeles Area chapter. While at CAIR-LA, she established relationships with local organizing groups and partnered with them to create the #VigilantLOVE Coalition for Los Angeles County. She is the Programs and Outreach Manager for HEART Women & Girls where she conducts educational workshops and forums on this topic. She continues her activism today to combat Islamophobia through her policy advocacy and community organizing.

PERSONAL TESTIMONY 証言

KAY OCHI, Co-chair of Nikkei For Civil Rights & Redress (NCRR), considers herself very fortunate to have participated in the historic campaign for redress and reparations throughout the 1980’s and 90’s, and the on-going education about the wartime incarceration and redress campaign at schools and colleges. She has also enjoyed being on the organizing committee of the LA Day of Remembrance since 1982. Ochi retired in 2002 and returned to her hometown, San Diego, in 2008. She commented: “My motivation in commuting each week from San Diego to Little Tokyo for meetings and events is rooted in the firm belief that the legacy of our wartime experience requires our speaking out and supporting other communities in this time of ethnic and religious targeting. Japanese Americans know how vile the effects of ‘failure of political leadership’ and unconstitutional executive orders are. Let’s keep up the good fight.”

GUEST SPEAKERS 講演者
MACEO HERNANDEZ began playing taiko when he was in the 7th grade after witnessing a local taiko group perform at a friend’s wedding. His training began at Montebello Sosenji Buddhist Temple and soon he was invited into Japan’s world-renowned taiko group Ondekoza, becoming the first Latino professional taiko player in the world. In 1994 Maceo formed East L.A. Taiko with Alfredo Ortiz, who has provided Latin percussion beats as a member of the Beastie Boys, Yeska, Ozomatli, and is also currently drummer for Gogol Bordello. In 2014, East L.A. Taiko began collaborating with Chicana rock star Lysa Flores. Lysa is the whole package: musician, actress, of the Art Institute of Chicago, Assoc. Artistic Director of Great Leap, and Resident Artist at 18th Street Arts Center in Santa Monica. www.dankwong.com

DAN KWONG is an award-winning multimedia performance artist, director, playwright and visual artist who has been presenting his work internationally since 1989. The significance of his body of work is acknowledged in A History of Asian American Theatre, and he has played a key role developing the next generations of Asian American performance artists through his teaching. His book, FROM INNER WORLDS TO OUTER SPACE: The Multimedia Performances of Dan Kwong, was published by Univ. of Michigan Press. Currently he is consultant on PULLproject with traci kato-kiriyama and Kennedy Kabasares. Dan is a graduate of the School of the Art Institute of Chicago, Assoc. Artistic Director of Great Leap, and Resident Artist at 18th Street Arts Center in Santa Monica. www.dankwong.com

PULLproject is LA-based duo Kennedy Kabasares (aerial artist/actor) and traci kato-kiriyama (writer/actor). Their work is based in devised theatre and aerial circus elements. Their current project, “Tales of Clamor” is a theatrical case-study that examines silence, the reverberations of a little-known yet major moment of American history, and the universal need for connection and collective noise in today’s socio-political landscape. Working in collaboration with Nikkei for Civil Rights and Redress (NDCR). “Tales of Clamor” uses theatrical scenes, circus elements, and rarely seen video footage from the 1981 Commission on Wartime Relocation and Internment of Civilians hearings. Its political texture calls on us to recognize the need for solidarity and the power of a community breaking silence, in order to create change. PULLproject and NDCR are recipients of the NET/TEN 2015 Exchange and 2016 Continuation Grant awards. Today’s cast members: Takayo Fischer, Kurt Kuniyoshi, Jilly Lee, Greg Watanabe.

SEAN MIURA is a fourth generation Japanese American community organizer and artist. Los Angeles-based writer. He is Producer/Curator of Little Tokyo’s Tuesday Night Cafe, the nation’s longest-running Asian American free open-mic series.

KYOKO TAKENAKA is a Nisei Asian-American singer-songwriter and visual artist. Her name means “vibrations of sound child” in Japanese. Heavily inspired by Fred Ho and Nina Simone, she believes in using music for personal and societal liberation. Originally from Boston, Kyoko has lived and performed in DC, NYC, Prague, and London. Her multi-media series on East-Asian owned take-aways, “Chop-Sueyism,” premiered at Autograph ABP gallery in London last spring. She feels honored to contribute her music and calligraphy to the 75th Day of Remembrance. Kyoko is releasing her debut single, “Prince” in late spring of 2017. Follow her music and visual work at www.jinjabrew.com: Social media: kyokosings

KYODO TAIKO is the nation’s first and oldest collegiate taiko drumming team. For 25 years, Kyodo Taiko has provided the unique form of Japanese drumming to the community through captivating performances and interactive workshops. Kyodo has two meanings – “family” and “loud children.” We function as a family and love to share the joy and spirit of taiko.

NOBUKO MIYAMOTO’s songs have been part of our community since the early 70’s. From working with Chris Iijima to create the album A Grain of Sand that became the soundtrack of the Asian American movement, to today’s collaboration with Quetzal on the FandangObon Project, bringing Japanese, Mexican and African American communities together around environmental concerns – Nobuko’s work has been about using the arts to engage people for positive change. Today she is joined by legendary singer “Atomic Nancy” Sekizawa along with Carla Vega and Quincy Surasmith, Taiji Miyagawa on bass, and Maceo Hernandez on taiko, in a new rendition of an old favorite.

TAIJI MIYAGAWA studied guitar before discovering the relationship between his experiences as a Japanese American and the music of African Americans. During the 1980’s, he began playing the bass while collaborating with the late composer/pianist Glenn Horuchi, with whom he recorded three albums: “Next Step,” “Issei Spirit,” and “Manzanar Voices.” He has collaborated with artists and poets such as Philip Kan Gotanda, Akihah Nayy Oliver, Denise Uyehara, Nobuko Miyamoto, Amy Uyematsu, Lawson Fusao Inada and others. Currently he is bassist for the Crenshaw district ensemble, “LosAKAtombros.”

2017 Day of Remembrance
75 Year Commemoration
Resistance at Tule Lake

February 25, 2017 - 2:00pm-4:00pm
Gardena Valley Japanese Cultural Institute
free admission

In 1943, the government tried to test the loyalty of Japanese Americans by forcing them to answer a controversial questionnaire that ultimately divided the community and initiated the formation of Tule Lake Segregation Center. Filmmaker Konrad Aderer tells this unique story in a new documentary called “Resistance at Tule Lake.” At the 2017 GVJCI DOR program we’ll be screening this film and hearing from a few of the people who lived at Tule Lake.

Tule Lake was the only WRA concentration camp converted to a maximum-security segregation center to punish over 12,000 Japanese Americans who protested the injustice of their mass incarceration. The Tule Lake site is now a Unit of the National Park Service, which wants to know how it should be developed. Your comments to the NPS are needed and will determine if Tule Lake will be open year-round with interpretive staff, and if visitors will be allowed access to the historic site.

Please show the NPS you support Tule Lake’s preservation and fill out a comment form. The deadline for comments was extended to Tuesday, February 28, 2017.

Go For Broke National Education Center
The passage of EO 9066 seventy five years ago marked the beginning of one of the darkest periods for civil rights in our nation’s history. Racism, fear and greed were allowed to surface above our nation’s commitment to its core value of equal protection under the law. From out of this context, Japanese Americans chose to serve in the armed forces and demonstrate their loyalty to the nation that had abandoned them. While EO 9066 is among the worst actions that our nation has committed, the response of the Japanese American veterans represents the best of what our nation can produce. Visit our exhibition, Go For Broke National Education Center’s Defining Courage Exhibition, and research the lives of our Nisei WWII veterans through our Hanashi Oral History Program. Commit to acting with equality and courage in life everyday. www.goforbroke.org 310-625-0414

On the 75th Commemoration of Executive Order 9066, we call for a movement to repeal the “new E.O. 9066” – The “Indefinite detention and endless war” sections of the National Defense Authorization Act (NDAA), as one part of a broad effort in the street, ballot box and beltway to push back Trump’s harmful agenda and maintain and expand our civil and constitutional rights.
